MISCELLANEOUS READING. FASHIONS FOR SUNDAY.

A poor widow with several children, who supported her tamily with her needle, unable to afford the style of dressing to which she had formerly been accustomed, and which was common among church goers, staid away for years from the House of God .--Another widow has recently assigned a similar reason for never going to church. And an entire family of six persons-respectable people-live near the writer, who absent themselves entirely from the sanctuary, because, in the depths of their poverty they have to dress in the cheapest attire. Probably every one who is at all acquainted with the annals of the poor knows of instances of the same kind. Their feeling of aversion to appearing at church in their cheapest garb is especially strong in those "who have seen better times." It is readily granted that the feeling is a wrong one; but it does exist, and does keep many persons, especially women and children, from the house of God --Now, what is the best way of removing the difficulty, which keeps, perhaps, several thousands of persons in our country from attending church, though they live quite near enough to go? In a few instances, the hand of benevolence might give the clothing desired, but to many, such a gift would be offensive. The best way of meeting the difficulty is the plan adopted in one of the cities north of us. The fashion of dressing very plainly for the sanctuary is being introduced. Some of the ladies "of the first circles" go to worship dressed in plain calico. How appropriate such a style as this is, (which the poor and the rich alike can adopt.) for the House of God, before whom all classes are on a level! How much better suited to the sanctuary, where we go to confess that we are spiritually poor and needy, than the richer attire which is so often but the exhibition of pride and vanity. How much more delicately and truly do we express a brotherly and sisterly love for God's poor, by adopting the style which poverty compels them to adopt, than by sweeping by them in costly plumes and flashing silks to our pews. Should this plain, cheap style of dressing for the Sabbath become general, it will be comparatively easy for the poor to provide themselves with Sab bath clothing, without making them the recipients of charity. And if those in easier circumstances should give to the treasury of the Lord, the difference between their present wardrobe expenses and what their expenses would be on the plan suggested, a large army of missionaries might be sustained from the funds thus saved. We commend the whole subject to the prayerful attention of Christian ladies. "Remember, sir," said a tavern-keeper to a gentleman who was about leaving his house without paying his bill, "remember, sir, that if you lose your purse, you didn't pull it out
